FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

SATURDAY, April 6-6 P. M Speculation on the Stock Exchange continues languard, and the bulls are disposed to await an easi r money market before resuming operations. The supply of car tal has been equal to the demand from good houses to day at seven per cent, and was, on the whole, larger than yesterday; but among weak and highly specula tive houses there were not a few complaints of monetary activity. The flow of currency from the interior eems to be partially neutralized by a drain not the treasury in payment for gold sold, the disburse ents being less rapid than the receipts, apparently. The ble than was generally expected, the deposits having it is estimated, been drawn down about five millions and the legal tenders between three and four millions The leans are likely to show a decrease of three-quarters of a million, and the specie of about half that amount. the bank statement next following the present one will

James McLigas, born August 10. 1810, at Tattycans, county Fermanagh, Ireland. In 1831 he arrived in America, and settled down in the city of New York. When still a young man he started business for himself as horseshoer and veterinary surgeon. In both of these branches he took out his diploma. By honesty of dealing, determination of character and dist of perseverance his career proved a successful one. Kind to all generous to the poor and afflicted, liberal and self-sacrificing to his friends, fondly devoted to his relatives and family, he could not but gather around him in the course of his life a large number of true and cherished friends. Although his political influence was not inconsiderable, he never received any favors from his party by way of office; but whenever any friend called upon him he was always ready to spend his time and money in order to get him isto the position sought after. His health has been, as a general thing, remarkably good through life, until the middle of November, 1886, when he had an attack of pneumonia, which turned into consumption. He bore his sickness with great fortitude and patience. During that time he was frequently strengthesed with the food of supernatural life, the holy cucharist. After a long and painful illness he died an easy and happy death, having received all the last rights of the Catholic Church.
